

Tyler Dean's restyling of Select International
Tours' Website

Original Page

Changes to be made: Stop the typing thing from moving, stop the video from playing, update with better color choices for the banner and buttons, shoot for a more consistent text styling across the page.

The screenshot shows the homepage of selectinternationaltours.com. Handwritten annotations include:

- Nice banner
- fancier font - trust, not scammy title
- blue buttons
- classic color
- one clear button
- margin wrong color (fixed by end)
- Are You Ready To Travel?
- SEE ALL THE TRIPS
- START HERE
- Click "Start Here," and we'll help you understand how to pick a trip, what to look for, and what to expect while traveling. If you ever get stuck, give us a call at 1-800-842-4842.
- Is this your first pilgrimage? Not sure what to expect or where to start? We're here to help!

The browser's developer tools are open, showing the CSS code for the page. A specific line of code is circled in black:

    .et_pb_fullwidth_header_1>#et_pb_text_align_left>#et_pb_text {
        margin-left: auto !important;
        margin-right: 0 !important;
    }

```

Messing w/element spacing

I changed the background color to a pastel color which is easier on the eyes. I paused the Carlo Acutis moving element, but I found I liked it better without the element. I removed the top search bar because it was cluttered. I changed button colors to be consistent across all buttons.

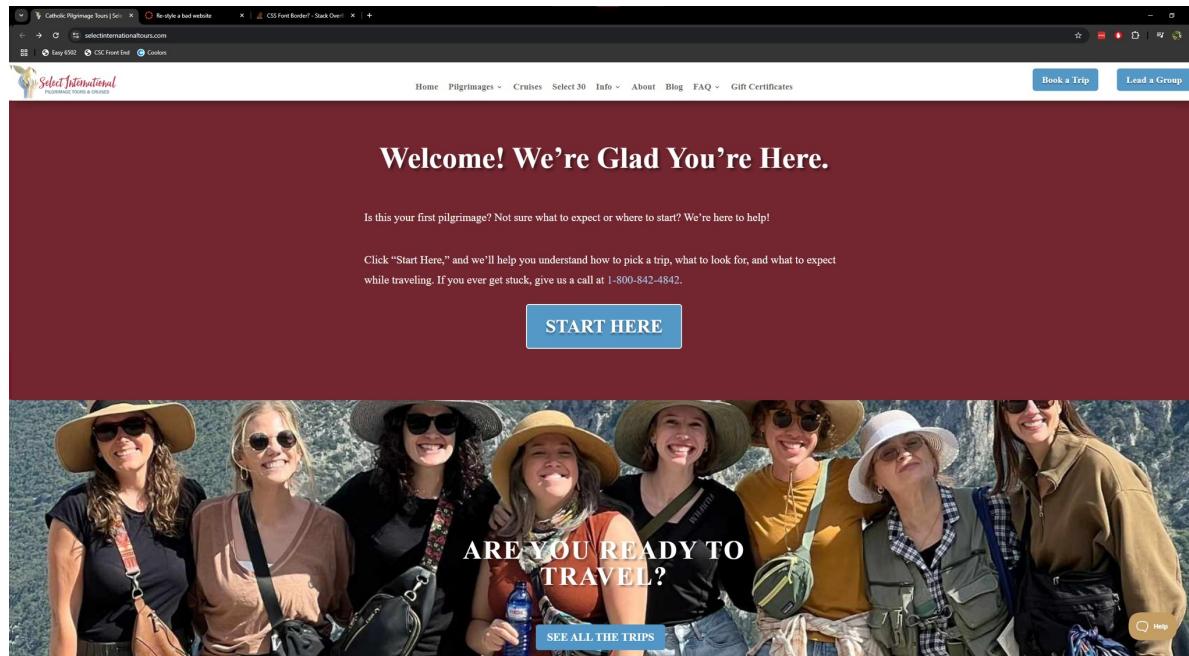

The 'We arrange pilgrimages' section was very bold and not very classy, so I removed it and changed all the font to Times New Roman.

This picture is the font change across the website. Font-family was changed in body and the elements were updated to use 'auto'.

I adjusted the colors of the buttons to all be consistent.

The final product vs the original

Calm + professional

Chaotic + unprofessional
